On his way to the Iowa Conference title, senior Scott Becker rides Central's Scott Storjohannn. Becker beat Storjohann, 8-5, and advanced to last weekend's NCAA Division III nationals in Wheaton, IL. Becker, a heavyweight, upped his season record to 32-6 on his way to finish fourth at nationals.

While Becker enjoyed the "thrill of victory," Wartburg's basketball team tasted "the agony of defeat" when it was discovered a scheduling oversight would prevent the Knights from advancing to the Division III playoffs. Stories on the two sports events begin on pages 4 and 5. Jon Gremmels photo.

Costs up 8.6 percent for '83-84 school year

Comprehensive student costs for the 1983-84 academic year, reflecting the smallest percentage of increase at Wartburg since 1977-78, were set by the college's Board of Regents at its annual winter meeting last week.

The board approved a total increase of $570, up only 8.597 percent, making the comprehensive cost $7,200 for 1983-84. Tuition is being raised $460 or 9.68 percent and room and board $110 or 5.85.

Increases in the previous four years had been near 12 percent. The lowest previous increase was 7.36 in 1977-78.

The increase approved by the Regents is average for private schools across the country, according to a recent survey in the Chronicle of Higher Education.

"We deliberately tried to hold board and room costs down," President Robert L. Vogel said. "The increase we have made simply reflects the present increase in the cost of living."

Vogel also noted that national studies show that increases in costs for higher education are somewhat higher than the consumer price index.

In its 1983-84 budget, Wartburg is increasing its financial aid program 15 percent. This increase in financial aid funds is the college's effort to compensate for the freeze in federal aid to cover some of the increase in costs.

Vogel said that the college also has made a special commitment to increase its budget for instruction to further enhance the college's academic quality. A new computer is being added this spring, and the new Business Administration Center is to be ready for use at the begining of the 1983-84 academic year.

"We will also continue our priorities on the recruitment of students, improving the quality of campus life and soliciting support from our constituencies to hold student costs down as much as possible. We hope to continue to reduce the financial burden placed on our students and their families."

Seven profs promoted

Promotions in rank were granted to seven Wartburg faculty members by action of the college's Board of Regents at its annual meeting last week.

Dr. August Waltmann was promoted to full professor of mathematics; Dorothy Starr, chairperson of the social work department, was promoted to associate professor of social work; Dr. Lynn Olson to associate professor of mathematics and computer science; Thomas Dumm to assistant professor of political science; Sandy Lobeck to assistant professor of biology; Kenneth Weitz to assistant professor of English; and Dr. Alice Woods to assistant professor of psychology.

New degree program approved by Regents

The granting of new degrees for students who transfer to Wartburg from two-year instiutions offering the Associate of Applied Arts (A.A.A.) or Associate of Applied Science (A.A.S.) degrees was authorized by the Wartburg Board of Regents at its annual winter meeting last week.

The new degrees are Bachelor of Applied Arts and Bachelor of Applied Science.

Under the new program, transfer students holding A.A.A. or A.A.S. degrees from acredited two-year institutions may substitute their completed programs for a traditional Wartburg major. After competing the remainder of Wartburg's liberal arts program, they would be eligible for the new four-year degree.

"It gives students from two-year schools an option to extend what they have done to a four-year degree," Dr. Edwin H. Welch, dean of the faculty and vice president for academic affairs, said.

The two-year student who transfers to Wartburg would retain the option to transfer into the bachelor of arts program and take a traditional major if so desired.

"This program is designed to encourage a closer working relationship between Wartburg and such two-year institutions as Hawkeye Institute of Technology [in Waterloo], North Iowa Area Community College [in Mason City] and other schools which grant the A.A.A. and A.A.S. degrees," Welch said.

Weather limiting progress on Bridge Building

by MATT WALKER

Progress on the Business Administration Center has slowed to a crawl, but Walter Fredrick, vice president for financial affairs and treasurer, maintains that the project is still on schedule.

"Considering the weather, they are on target," said Fredrick. "The general contractor representative feels good about the progress and isn't worried about completing it before the deadline."

The building is scheduled to be ready for use in September.

Fair weather in December allowed the contractors to work with a full crew of workers, but inclement conditions since Jan. 1 have cut the crew to three or four men. Their work is limited to small jobs around the project.

The cold weather has created a structural delay for the building because it has been too cold to pour the concrete for the first floor. The concrete needs to have warmer weather so it won't freeze and so it can cure properly, Fredrick said. Curing prevents cracks and other faults that can occur when pouring concrete.

Despite the weather delays, the project is 32 percent complete in two of the three areas according to Fredrick. Construction and electrical work are both one-third done, while no percentage was available for the plumbing.

Wartburg has paid the contractors $59,100 for work done on the project for the month of January. Youngblut Construction Co. Inc. was paid $125,197, Kinseth Plumbing Inc., received $21,780 and Dean's Light Box earned $12,142.

Since the start of the building, fees the college has paid the contractors total slightly more than half one million dollars. To date, Youngblut Construction Inc. has been paid $358,995, Kinseth Plumbing $91,890 and Dean's Light Box $56,081 for a total of $506,966.

"The contractors and I feel confident about the completion goals," said Fredrick. "Their progress will depend, again, on the severity of the remainder of this winter and how much warm weather there is this spring."

That magnificent M*A*S*H

War is hell.

This often-used cliche creates thoughts of death, destruction and waste. This cliche came to life on the CBS series, "M*A*S*H."

But tonight, that series will come to an end after 11 years on the air. This highly rated show will conclude with a 2½-hour special episode, in which the Korean War is brought to an end.

"M*A*S*H" was unique and successful because it was able to entertain people, but still examine delicate issues important to this country.

"M*A*S*H" could make us laugh at the foolishness of the army, then cry at the destruction the army could cause.

Millions of Americans will view the final episode. As reruns of "M*A*S*H" are shown, it's important that these Americans recognize the meaning and purpose of this show.

War was, is, and always will be hell. In this nuclear age, the thought of war is even more terrifying. "M*A*S*H" has helped show that to us.

As the show comes to an end, it's vital to our future that the issues discussed in "M*A*S*H" do not end. We need to eliminate the Frank Burns attitude of our society. War, be it a "police action" as in Korea or an all-out nuclear confrontation, does not solve our problems. It only creates many, many more.

Exciting sights and sounds on Highway 218

People that are unknowledgeable about Iowa's highways say that they're boring. It's simply not true, if you've ever driven to Waterloo/Cedar Falls on Highway 218. There's gobs of stuff to see and make fun of.

Before a person even gets out of Waverly there are sights to set the blood rushing. Depending if you're from Iowa or not, the sight of the rival International Harvester dealership just down the road from the ever-awing John Deere store could have you polishing your guns. If I remember anything about my years in Iowa, it'll be that John Deere ran virtually the whole state. Actually I don't care about John Deere—Dad has a Massey Fergusen.

Waverly can boast having something else of worth. (Besides the John Deere store.) Uniroyal has a most unusual display of an elephant made out of old tires and a bird standing on a roll ot rusty wire.

If a person ever needs a new kitchen, he'll know just where to go. Outside of town "Kitchens by Ronnie" stands as a symbol of what people will buy if they have the money and are foolish.

One time a friend of mine from Wisconsin visited and we decided to hit all the stores in Waterloo. (Shopping is our favorite sport.)

"I thought there were pigs in Iowa," she said.

"There are," I replied. "Everywhere."

"Then why aren't there any here?" she persisted.

Folks, if you're in the mood to inhale the unforgettable smell of pigs, you won't be satisfied on 218. There just aren't any. Bummer, huh.

Anyone who's of legal driving age in eastern Iowa knows about Janesville. ("The oldest city in Bremer County." Wow.) The minute I mentioned that I had my car on campus, people rushed up to tell me about the fear-provoking cop that sets up speed traps and gets speeders, even if they're only going one mile over the limit. I'm ashamed to admit it, but I've never even seen the guy.

Another thing about Janesville is its bridge. I hate it. I'm convinced that it's too narrow for a semi and a good-sized car. I always risk the wrath of that legended cop and speed over the bridge, praying fervently that I won't meet any oncoming vehicles.

If I'd ever take my glassy eyes off the side of the bridge (watching for the instant my fender hits it), I'd see a scenic view of the winding Cedar River. Maybe I should write travel brochures. Then again, maybe not.

Past Janesville there are several sights to behold, including the Neita Race Way (Speed Capital of the Midwest), the Cenex Seed Corn Plant and the Iowa State Trap Shooters Association. (Shooting every Sunday.)

When you eventually return to Waverly on 218, don't forget to notice the engineering marvel that makes a car decrease speed going down a hill just before Jack and Jill's.

I must admit that I have been on lots of more boring roads in my life. The only excitement at home is driving by the buffalo ranch. It loses its thrill after a while.

Now the next time you head down to Waterloo, be thankful of all the sites Highway 218 is blessed with. And they don't excite you, feel free to mock and scorn.

The final episode of "M*A*S*H" is on tonight. Watch it if you get a chance. One of America's most cherished shows is finally ending, much to the dismay of millions of people. It may rival "The Winds of War" in ratings. May "M*A*S*H" live on forever, in the same tradition of Mary Tyler Moore, Archie Bunker and Gilligan's Island. It'll never be forgotten.

Student revives Women of Wartburg issue following 'ignorant' comments by Piecuch

This is an open letter to our Student Body President, Brian Piecuch.

I would like to talk to you about the article by Chuck Offenburger that appeared in last Sunday's (Feb. 20, 1983) Des Moines Register.

You are quoted as asking the question, "What's it tell you about the Women of Wartburg [WOW] that except for [Ross] Buehler, all of us guys were able to fit into the girls' uniforms?"

Now most people recognize this as a rhetorical question, not a question looking for an answer. However, I fail to see your point, Brian. Please tell me, what does it tell us about the Women of Wartburg? (Or better yet, what does it tell us about the Men(?) of Wartburg?)

Are you trying to say the Women of Wartburg are just too fat? If so, by whose standards are they too fat? The anorexic's? Or maybe you meant that it's just the pompon squad that needs to lose weight. Possibly you were trying to imply that the Men of Wartburg are too thin? Just what does it mean?!

Whether it was conscious or unconscious, your implication expresses a predilection held by far too many men and women. Do you really believe that an important, significant constituent of women is measured in pounds? Comments such as yours reinforce a misconception that is unjust, ignorant, cruel and prejudicial. Just what did you mean?

Before you answer, may I remind you that as Student Body President, you are both a leader to and a representative of one thousand one hundred and thirty-one full and part-time students. You happen to represent 632 FEMALES as well as 499 males?

So tell me please, just what are you trying to say about the Women of Wartburg? It seems to me, Brian, that if one has nothing valuable to say, one should say nothing.

In this case, I sincerely hope you were misquoted.

Janel F. Roling, freshman

Janel Roling's letter (left) is in response to comments by Wartburg Student Body President Brian Piecuch (far right) about this halftime show in which Piecuch joined other "Men of Wartburg" to perform a routine. Des Moines Register columnist Chuck Offenburger quotes Piecuch asking a question about the women of Wartburg, a question which prompted Roling to write her letter.

Housing sign-ups set; Manor process changed

Manor housing sign-ups have been simplified this year, according to Rose Kukla, assistant dean of students and director of residential life. Housing sign-ups are scheduled for March 28-30.

The modified manor sign-up process was developed through dialogue between Kukla and senior Robin Krahn, Student Senate ombudsman. Kukla said additional details must still be clarified by further feedback from senate.

"This year, the manor sign-ups will be conducted in the East Room," Kukla explained. "We will sign up senior/-senior roommate combinations first, then senior/junior combinations, each at a different time."

Only one person is required to represent a room, according to Kukla. Students will no longer sign up as suites and the sign-up will be based on a simple drawing process. She emphasized that students need to have a roommate in order to sign up for the manors.

Kukla said the remaining schedule will be identical to last year. Manor sign-ups are Monday, March 28, individuals wanting their current room or floor sign up Tuesday and students wishing to change halls or floors sign up on Wednesday.

"We had two problems last year that resulted in some confusion," Kukla said. "Some students were not aware that a room deposit was required, and there were problems with the requirement of having a roommate before sign-up."

If a student requests an incoming, international or transfer student as a roommate, he or she must pick up a slip verifying this from the Student Affairs Office before signing up, according to Kukla.

Kukla also emphasized that room deposits are due before or by March 21 and that students must show their room deposit slip in order to be eligible for the housing sign-up. She added that the deposits are refundable until June 15.

Forms are available in the Student Activities Office for students wishing to live off campus next year, according to Dorothy Diers, assistant director of housing and secretary of student affairs. Students must apply for permission by March 14 and announcements will be made March 18 at 4 p.m.

Benefit supper tonight for nuclear freeze lobby

A supper is scheduled for tonight at Peace United Church of Christ to benefit the Citizens Lobby for a U.S./ Soviet Nuclear Weapons Freeze.

Interested persons are asked to bring a sack supper to the event, which will run from 5:30 to 7:15 p.m. in the church's lower level Fellowship Hall. Peace United Church of Christ is located at 315 First Street Northwest, seven blocks east of the Student Memorial Union.

According to Earlene Hawley, one of the event's coordinators, the benefit has a six-fold purpose. The main reason is to support Iowa delegates at the Citizen's Lobby Freeze in Washington, DC, March 7 and 8.

Six Wartburg students—senior Janet Hunt, junior Martha Hunt and sophomores Liisa Carlstrom, Sheri Dean, Teresa Zimmerman and Beth Wagner—and at least three Waverly residents will attend the Washington event.

Other reasons for the benefit supper include: 1) to get support for the Lobby's grass-roots movement; 2) to sign a proxie letter which will be taken to Washington with the Lobby; 3) to write personal letters for the Freeze to Congressmen; 4) to raise donations to assist the delegate's expenses and to help the State Freeze movement; and 5) "to get together in a jolly peace gathering."

Two films on the arms race are also featured at the event.

Knightliters' cafeteria concert scheduled for tomorrow night

Wartburg's Knightliters, the college jazz band are featured in two concerts this week, according to Dr. Robert Lee, the band's director.

The jazz band performs tomorrow night at 5:45 in the cafeteria and again Wednesday night at 8 in Buhr Lounge of the Student Memorial Union.

Lee said the cafeteria performance has been added "as an alternative concert place." He added, "We've got a real decent band" and think that the students should hear them perform.

Features include a trombone solo by senior Glenn Ottmar, who will play "A Time for Love" from the library of trombonist Bill Watrous. Also featured is a women's triple trio, which will sing the Andrews Sisters' classic from the 1950s, "Mr. Sandman."

The Knightliters will also perform music by Quincy Jones, Count Basie, Thad Jones and Woody Herman.

The Ujamaa Basketball Marathon is set for March 12 and 13. It will begin at 6 p.m. Saturday and run until 6 p.m. Sunday. Floors or organizations interested in participating may contact senior Nancy Bertz, ext. 345, or senior Bev Wetzel, ext. 288, to register.

An Ujamaa Week Coffeehouse is scheduled for Wednesday, March 16, at 7:30 p.m. in Buhr Lounge of the Student Memorial Union. People interested in performing are asked to call freshman Greg Brown, ext. 225, sophomore Paul Langholz, ext. 293, or sophomore Zeb Zabidi, ext. 329. The coffeehouse is co-sponsored by Campus Ministry, Black Minority Awareness Organization and International Club.

Tuesday, March 1, is the deadline for submitting applications for Wartburg's annually funded and endowed scholarships.

Monday, March 7, is the last day to withdraw from a Spring Term class. Students wishing to drop a class must turn a drop card with their adviser's and instructor's signatures into the Registrar's office by 4:30 p.m.

Seniors have until March 11 to stop at the Bookstore and be measured for caps and gowns without having to pay a $5 late charge.

Applications for summer employment on campus must be turned in to the Financial Aid Office by March 18. Applications are available there. The number of positions is limited.

Chapel schedule for this week is:
Tuesday, March 1—Father Jack Kissling (Neumann Auditorium, 10 a.m.)
Thursday, March 3—Morning Suffrages, Chaplain Larry Trachte (Neumann Auditorium, 10 a.m.)
Friday, March 4—Janet Hunt, senior (Buhr Lounge, 10 a.m.)

Single-room applications for next year are available from resident directors or from the Student Affairs Office.

A five-session course designed especially for students thinking of marriage, begins Tuesday, March 1, in the Student Memorial Union Conference Room. The first session, which runs from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., is entitled "Is It Love—Will It Last?" Chaplain Larry Trachte will lead the free series.

A Mnemonics videotape will be shown tonight at 6:30 in Room 15 of the Engelbrecht Library. The Learning Resource Center, which is presenting the show, invites people interested in improving their memory to attend.

The athletic department is now taking applications for trainers for the 1983-84 school year. Athletic Director John Kurtt has more information and applications for those interested in the positions.

An intramural racquetball tournament is planned. Anyone interested in participating is asked to sign up at the PE Center Control Desk, 8 a.m.-6 p.m., Monday or 8 a.m.-3 p.m. Tuesday, March 1. Categories include men's and women's singles and men's and women's doubles.

Registration is open until March 4, for those interested in jump roping for three hours to raise money for the American Heart Association, Saturday, March 26. Students may register in the north line at the cafeteria. Senior Nancy Delp, ext. 387, box 423, has more information as do RAs and RMs.

Dr. John Donnelson, a University of Iowa biochemist, will present a lecture on "An Introduction to Genetic Engineering Techniques and their Application, Current Development and Prospects for the Future," tonight at 6 in Becker Hall, Room 308. Donnelson has been one of the first to incorporate eukaryotic DNA into prokaryotic bacteria, and presently is using recombinant DNA techniques to study the disease, sleeping sickness. His presentation has been arranged as part of the Science Seminar class 461.

Basketball Coach Buzz Levick is accepting three- or six-color sketches of a design for T-shirts to promote the basketball team's trip to Hawaii in December 1983 and January 1984. Any student interested in submitting a design to Levick in the Union Director's Office should do so by March 10. A $25 prize will be awarded for the winning sketch.

All-America honors for Becker

Senior Scott Becker earned All-America honors by placing fourth in the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) national wrestling championships in Wheaton, IL Saturday.

Becker, who closed out his career with an 84-25-1 record, also won the award for most falls in the least amount of time. Becker pinned three opponents in a combined time of 5:14, raising his number of career pins to 67.

The heavyweight, who was the Iowa Conference champion, became the second Knight to win the pinning trophy. Paul Guillaume won the award in 1977 when he placed third at 190.

Wartburg's other national qualifier, junior Mike Hogan, lost his opening match at 142 and was eliminated. Hogan, voted the Iowa Conference Most Valuable Wrestler after winning his third straight title Feb. 17, was seeded eighth at nationals. Becker was the fourth seed at heavyweight.

Brockport State (NY) successfully defended its team title. Trenton State (NJ) was the runner-up, while two teams Wartburg competed against during the season, Augsburg and Augustana (IL) finished third and fifth respectively. St. Lawrence (NY) placed fourth.

Although team standings below the top 10 were not announced, Wartburg Coach Dick Walker estimated that the Knights finished in the top 20. Iowa Conference champion Buena Vista placed eighth and Luther was ninth.

Greg Lonning of Luther earned the national title at 118 by beating John Barna of Trenton State. The Norsemen's Scott Bouslog placed fourth at 158.

Other Iowa Conference wrestlers who placed and earned All-America honors were Ryan Haines of Upper Iowa, sixth at 118 and Buena Vista's Curt Cawley, third at 126, Jon Beuter, sixth at 158 and Brian Bedard, seventh at 177.

Lonning, Cawley, Bouslog and Bedard all were conference champs, while Haines and Beuter placed second.

Wartburg took fourth in the conference meet in Knights Gym, after being picked as a possible contender for the crown.

Walker was disappointed with the Knights' performance in the conference tournament. He added that young teams such as the Knights (which entered four freshmen and three sophomores in the meet) can have problems in tournaments.

"Younger teams can wrestle inconsistently in tournaments as we did," Walker said.

Luther nosed out Central to capture second place in the conference meet. Central had five wrestlers in the finals, and a win by any of those would have allowed the Dutchmen to finish second. All five lost, though, and Central ended up in third place.

Walker said the tournament was "awfully good and very competitive." He added that it was one of the best in recent years.

Wartburg placed seven wrestlers in the semi-final round, but could push only two (Becker and Hogan) into the finals.

Placing third for the Knights were sophomore Bing Miller at 118, senior Ryan Abel at 167 and sophomore Scott Ruhnke at 177. Two freshmen, Bruce Streicher at 126 and Al Hoeper at 158, placed fourth for Wartburg.

Knights violate NCAA rule, denied playoffs

by JIM BUCHHEIM

A scheduling technicality has denied the Wartburg men's basketball team a spot in the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) Division III playoffs and could possibly affect the Knights' first Iowa Conference title since 1975.

Wartburg violated the NCAA rule of 26 basketball contests for Division III schools, according to Athletic Director John Kurtt. The Knights participated in a closed scrimmage with Witham Chevrolet of Cedar Falls in November.

The scrimmage did not violate NCAA rules, however, scrimmages must be included toward the 26-contest limit. The Knights played 26 regular season games in addition to the scrimmage, thus violating the rule.

"It was just an oversight," Kurtt said. "They [the NCAA] count scrimmages so teams don't take advantage of the scrimmages."

Kurtt said the rule was established so teams can't take advantage of the players by scheduling so many games that academic responsibilities are neglected.

Dejected Wartburg head coach Lewis "Buzz" Levick said the failure to gain the playoffs "mars a great season." He added that "it's really too bad for the players. They're the one's who will really suffer."

According to the NCAA Manual, Article Three, Section Three, "Limitations on Number of Contests:—A member institution shall limit its total playing schedule in the sports of football and basketball in any one year to the number of contests (games or scrimmages) with outside competition set forth in this section."

The limits set by the NCAA are 26 contests for Division III members, and 27 for Division I and II institutions. A proposal at this year's national NCAA meeting would raise the number to 27 for Division III if passed.

"We were limited to 26. There's nothing for us to do," Kurtt said. "It's very unfortunate for Buzz [Levick] and for the kids. I really feel for them."

The unfortunate playoff situation dampens an extraordinary conference turnaround. The Knights won their final seven loop games after a 3-4 start, to tie William Penn for the league title. Both teams finished at 10-4 in conference play, while the Knights sported a 21-5 overall record. The Statesmen, 19-6 overall, will represent the Iowa Intercollegiate Athletic Conference (IIAC) in the 32-team Division III playoffs.

Kurtt was unsure how the violation would be handled and whether the Knights would be forced to surrender their share of the league crown.

The Knights closed out the conference season with a weekend road sweep of the University of Dubuque and Upper Iowa. Wartburg closed out its home season over Midterm break with decisive wins over Simpson and Buena Vista (Feb. 18 and 19).

Seniors Mark Merritt and Greg Schmitz combined for 46 points to help down Dubuque Friday night, 81-65. Senior Bobby Garris was the only other player in double figures with 10 points.

That same night William Penn lost to Simpson, falling into a first-place tie with the Knights.

In Saturday's contest at Upper Iowa, junior center Dan DeVries came off the bench to lead a balanced scoring attack, with 18 points. Schmitz and senior Steve Schulz each scored 15, while Merritt added 12 points and closed out his career with 1309 points, moving into seventh place on Wartburg's all-time scoring list.

Wartburg played perhaps its finest game of the year Friday, Feb. 18, when it used 68 percent shooting from the field to upend Simpson, 87-70, in Knights Gym.

Merritt led the way for the Knights with 27 points. Junior Rich Barnett chipped in with 19 points, and Schmitz added 14. Simpson's Keith Edmonds canned eight three-point field goals and paced the Redmen with 24 points.

Merritt was Wartburg's top scorer in the home finale Saturday, Feb. 19, against Buena Vista. He scored 31 points in the Knights' 85-65 victory. DeVries added 16 points for Wartburg, while Barnett added 10.

Upper Iowa's Ted Lujan flies across the lane to swat the ball away from freshman Tom Gilles. Gilles scored 9 points in Wartburg's 83-60 win over Upper Iowa in Fayette Saturday night. The Knights finished in a tie for the Iowa Conference title with William Penn, but violated an NCAA rule and have been denied a playoff berth. Jon Gremmels photo.

Men, Women take second in home meet

Huston wins twice, paces Knights in four-team meet

Sparked by sophomore Dan Huston's two first-place finishes and senior Dennis Washington's school record in the long jump, the men's track team took second place in their own quadrangular Friday night in the Physical Education Center.

Wartburg scored 74½ points, two behind Grinnell. Dubuque finished third with 17 and Iowa Wesleyan finished fourth with 4 points.

Huston won the mile run in 4:31.27 and the 880 in 2:02.98, using a strong kick to egde Grinnell's Dave Schengber. Washington won the long jump with a 22-4½, breaking his own record of 22-1.

Junior Scott Smith was the only other first-place finisher for the Knights, winning the two-mile run in 9:59.23.

The Knights got second-place finishes from sophomore Brad Bowman in the 60-yard high hurdles, junior Tom Gauerke in the 440, senior Bill Puffett in the 600, Washington in the 60-yard dash and the 300, and junior Steve Rogers in the 1000.

The 4-lap relay team of Washington, senior Jeff Walczyk, junior LaBrent Lawler and Gauerke also took second, as did the mile relay team of Lawler, Walczyk, Puffett and Gauerke.

"As a team, we improved and ran well," Coach John Wuertz said. "Everyone contributed."

The Knights host Simpson and William Penn Friday in the PE Center. Field events will start at 5:30.

Aided by sophomore Brad Bowman (right), senior Bill Puffett tries to recover following his 440 in the mile relay. Puffett, who helped the relay team to a second place finish, placed in two individual events helping the Knights to a second-place finish behind Grinnell in Friday's quadrangular in the PE Complex.

Slow start dooms Knights; frosh topple two records

The women's track team suffered their first setback of the year, finishing second in their own five-team meet, one point behind Cornell.

Cornell finished with 50 points, while Grinnell had 43, Iowa Wesleyan finished with 39 and Dubuque finished with 8 points.

"Overall, we did pretty well," Coach Liz Wuertz said. "We had a slow start. We may have been nervous, being in front of the home crowd for the first time."

Two school records and two first-place finishes highlighted the meet for the Knights. Freshman Sarah Lutz won the two-mile run with a new school record time of 12:08, breaking Kelly Goodwin's record of 12:19. Junior Becky Sullivan won the high jump with a 5-2 leap, and freshman Andrea Janssen finished second in the 300, in a school record time of 39.16.

Janssen and Lutz also took second-place finishes in the long jump and mile run respectively.

Third-place finishers for the Knights were freshman Kyra Kettelson in the 60-yard hurdles, junior Beth Buckley in the high jump, freshman Mere Hamilton in the 440, junior Julie Harding in the 60-yard dash, and freshman Karen Baumgartner in the two-mile.

The women will try to return to their winning ways Friday, hosting Luther, Simpson and William Penn.

Women cagers close season with win, loss

Wartburg closed out the women's basketball season, splitting two games in the final week.

Wartburg beat Coe, 53-43, Tuesday, but tumbled to Loras, 62-49, Thursday in a make-up game from earlier this year. The split put the Knights' record at 7-14 for the season. However, Coach Kathy Meyer said the record will be raised to 9-14 when Wartburg is awarded two forfeit wins over Upper Iowa, which was unable to field a team for its two games against the Knights.

Meyer said that since there is no longer a state tournament for the players to look forward to at the end of the season, her players lacked a bit of intensity in their final week of play.

Loras's Cathy Coyle, a 6-5 center, scored 22 points to lead Loras past Wartburg. The Knights led by one at the half but couldn't hold on to the lead in the second half.

"It was a disappointing loss," Meyer said. "We weren't real sharp." On the positive side, though, she said she was pleased with the play of sophomore Sandy Bill and with the team's free throw shooting—the Knights connected on 17 of 21 attempts.

Junior Lynn Dose, who led the Knights in scoring and rebounding for the second straight year, tossed in 13 points to top the Knights.

Dose scored 18 points to lead the Knights past Coe Tuesday. Meyer said the Knights were again a little flat but played much better in the second half after a slow start.

She complimented Dose for having a good game.

"Lynn wheeled and dealed well on the inside and also rebounded well," Meyer said.

Dose was also the individual leader in rebounding in this year's first season of Iowa Conference competition for women.

Meyer believes she has a good nucleus returning for next year with only one senior, Diane Smith, on this year's club.

"We've got some good people in the program," Meyer said. "We just need some others to round out the program and give it some punch."

Baseball fan finds former slugger speaks truth

Stargell lives by the Book

by JOY BOWDEN

Growing up in a family that walks, talks and eats baseball during the summer made me aware of baseball greats such as Sandy Koufax, Don Drysdale, Jackie Robinson, Roy Campanella, Joe DiMaggio and Mickey Mantle.

And I knew more than their names. My father, a coach, made certain I knew what they had contributed to baseball and what their philosophies on the game were. And he would comment on how I could benefit if I adopted these philosophies myself.

Willie "Pops" Stargell is one of those players my father told me about, and I will not forget Wednesday, Feb. 16—the day this legend came to Wartburg and I met him and heard him speak. Here is a man who has lived his life as an example to everyone.

I had learned of Stargell when I was younger, and I still remember the 1979 World Series in which he was the "most valuable player." Now I had a chance to meet him and I was excited. But that excitement did not match the awe I felt upon hearing the truth of his words.

Because he is a black professional ball player, he deals with racial discrimination daily and his first comments to questions addressed that subject. Stargell had no trouble stating his feelings.

"When you get to the heart of the matter, we are all just people," he said. "It doesn't matter if you are black, white, red or green. The Bible says we are all created equal, doesn't it? It doesn't say one color is better than another color, does it? I may be mistaken, but I don't think so."

With his eyes fixed upon me, I felt almost compelled to answer out loud, "It most certainly does not!" But my sense of properness outweighed the inspiration his voice and words instilled in me and I continued to listen.

"It was hard being black and wanting to play baseball," he continued. "One time a shotgun was held to my head and a man told me, 'Nigger, if you play tonight I'm gonna blow your brains out.' Incidents like that make you wonder if it's all worthwhile. But I still had a desire to play baseball, so I didn't care what kind of treatment I was subjected to."

If I wasn't totally attentive by this time, Stargell's next words held me fast in my seat. For he revealed that he wasn't just a ball player, he was a man who believed in God and wanted to do what was right for all.

"The Bible is the dictionary of life. I believe this and it has helped me many times. After the sixth game of the 1979 World Series I had a temperature of 103 degrees and I was weak with the chills. I got down on my knees and prayed. Nothing less than a broken back was going to keep me from playing that game. I woke the next morning feeling a little better, but not much. I got to the ballpark and some of the guys there got me some coffee and hot soup. Little by little I began to feel better and then a warm rush overtook me. I knew everything was going to be all right."

Stargell stressed many times during the day his belief in the power of prayer and certain theories in life that he has found to be true. One of these is to follow the advice of your parents.

"My parents told me never go to bed at night being mad at someone. I almost forgot this one time, but as I was lying in bed those words came back to me. I got up, jumped in the car and went to the house of the man I was mad at and told him I was man enough to admit I was wrong, so let's be friends."

When asked who was the one person from his childhood that had the largest impact on his life, Stargell answered very simply, "Mom."

"My mother has made some large sacrifices for my sister and myself. When you see athletes being interviewed on TV and they pop in with a 'Hi, Mom,' it's not just because they are being cute. It's because 'mom' is important to them. There is a strong bond between a mother and a child. I make it a point every Sunday morning to give my mom a call, and I'll never be so big I'll stop doing that. That is one lovely lady back there in Oakland, California."

Not only does Stargell follow the teachings of his parents, but he is an avid follower of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., whose work he is now narrating in conjuction with the Eastman Philharmonic.

"I've gotten into a whole area I know nothing about," said Stargell. But even that fact will not keep him from voicing his beliefs in a new medium that will reach different crowds of people. Only now his uniform is a tuxedo, and his playing field is a concert stage.

Former Pittsburgh Pirate baseball player drives home a point on the importance of moms during his convocation address. Stargell spoke at Wartburg Feb. 16.

Even his story of the journey from a neighborhood vacant lot in California to major league ball parks carries a faint echo of the teachings of Dr. King.

"I had a childhood dream, and I followed it. He had a dream."

Hearing it from the mouth of Willie Stargell, I could now believe what my own father had told me. Good hitters come from spending long hours by themselves hitting rocks with sticks. I used to think that was corny, but to little Willie Stargell, it was reality.

"My grandfather would walk me and they said I would always be reaching out to grab things and then throw them. Later on they said I was always swinging at things.

"There was a vacant lot a ways from the project where I lived. When I got older, I would take a stick and hit rocks all the way out of major league ball parks. Back then people thought I was crazy. They'd say, 'You're a boy from the projects, and that's a long way from major league ballparks.' But I had a childhood dream and I followed it."

When Stargell made it to the majors, he still spent hours on his hitting.

"To be good, you have to hit and hit until it bleeds, and I would take about 200 ground balls a day. The person who is going the extra mile will determine what success is. You've heard a winner never quits and a quitter never wins. I believe that the price of winning is a lot of hard work."

It seems that Willie Stargell thrives on hard work. His narration on the works of Dr. King, the time spent making people aware of sickle-cell anemia, the fund raisers, traveling the country talking at colleges and universities on minority awareness. The list goes on.

"I always set my goals high enough so I can't reach them. I always want to be grabbing, because I always think there is room for improvement."

Possibly, he will one day return to baseball as a manager. He had an offer to manage the Oakland A's this October, which he turned down in order to devote time to his other duties.

In some ways, Stargell reminded me of my own father. Maybe that's why his words have had such an effect. He could be a "Pops" to everyone, and no one would be ashamed to pattern their own life by his example or to heed his words on how to live a successful life.

"Be a good listener and take that Bible with you wherever you go. The Bible is the dictionary of life. And above all, make a point of getting along with people."

Thank you, Pops.
